As an analogy, it's harder to produce novel developments if you're the market-leading company; it's easier if you're a competitor trying to catch up, because you know what to aim for and what kinds of designs to reverse-engineer. Each of these indicates a connection between authenticity and freedom.
But humans already understand the source code of present-day
AIs with an eye toward improving it.

Multiplying by Zero Any reasonably educated person knows that any number multiplied by zero is zero. See Earman and Norton for an introduction to the extensive literature on these topics. It seems better suited to academia or government, although Google is not a normal company and might also play the leading role. Heidegger points out that involvements are not uniform structures. And if we went there, we'd be fried to a crisp. Eudemus, a student of Aristotle, offered another interpretation. It is nonetheless a positive ontological phenomenon—a necessary feature of the essential unfolding of Being.
